Potter County Education Council (PCEC) Announces Its Newest Partner

Education Consortium of the Upper Allegheny (ECUA)

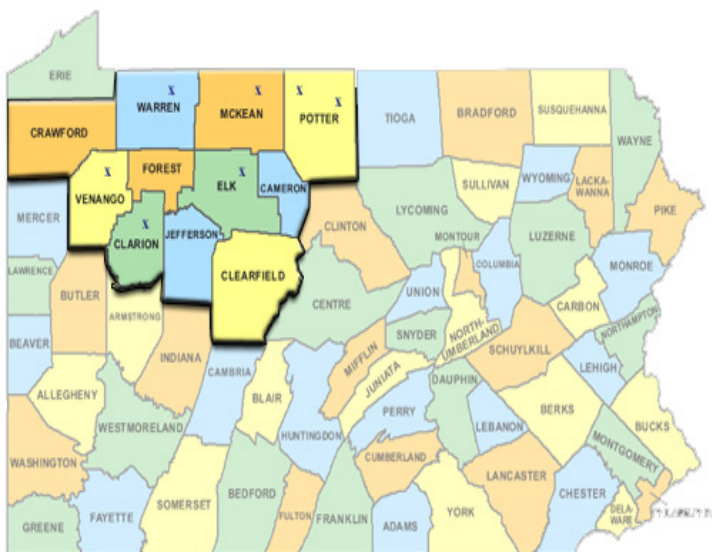

The Community Education Councils (CEC) provide services to the rural populations north of Interstate 80 that lack the advantages that the community colleges offer.

To assist and augment the CEC's meeting of the post secondary and workforce training demands the Education Consortium of the Upper Allegheny was formed. The ECUA will become a central resource allowing people the access, affordability and articulation that a community college can offer.

Serving Cameron, Clarion, Clearfield, Crawford, Elk, Forest, Jefferson, McKean, Potter, Venango and Warren counties, the Education Consortium of the Upper Allegheny aims to facilitate cost-effective access to the education you deserve!

The mission of the ECUA is to work with existing CECs, educational institutions, and organizations to develop a system leading to greater accessibility for our students at affordable rates.

ECUA is committed to using the existing resources in the region to deliver programming. To that end, 22 school districts, 4 Career and Technology Centers, and 4 CECs have agreed to host programming. Several community colleges are already on board with ECUA to provide new and additional associate degrees and industry certificates to the CECs and the counties they serve and at additional sites throughout the eleven county region.

Along with this the ECUA will develop a reliable single source of information on regional educational and training opportunities, utilizing the distance education infrastructure in the region to its fullest potential. By being a central resource for residents of the eleven counties, ECUA will provide users with local and distance education course schedules, information, and affordable rates.
